

What Is Medical Repatriation?

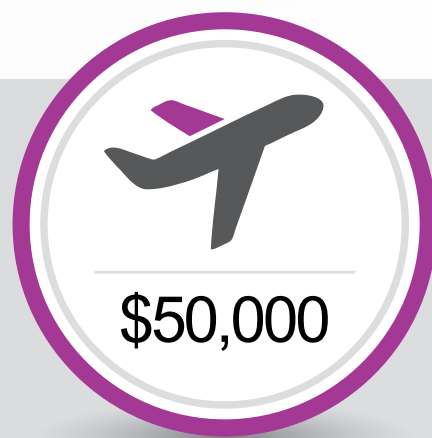

Medical repatriation refers to the transfer of a person to their country of origin. While the term could refer to any person regardless of their health status, repatriation is often a euphemism for the shipping of a body back to the person's home country for burial.

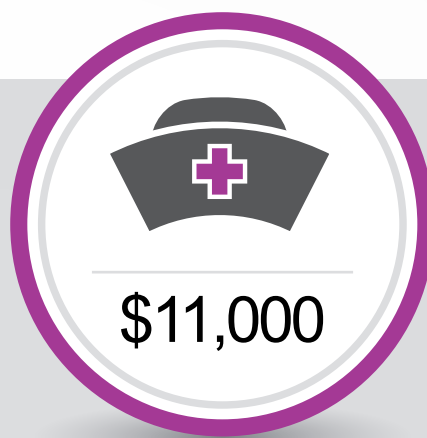

GOINGHOME
MEDICAL

Medical Evacuation
Cost Within
North America

Medical Evacuation
Cost From Europe

Average Flight
Nurse Cost Within
North America

Average Flight
Nurse Cost From Europe

Frequency of travelers requiring outpatient treatment — one per 1,000 trips

Frequency of travelers being admitted to hospitals as inpatients — one per 2,000 trips

Frequency of travelers requiring medical evacuation — one per 4,000 trips

Falls and their resulting bone fractures constitute 42% of medical emergencies

Heart attacks and strokes constitute about 22% of overseas medical emergencies

36% of medical emergencies comprises a variety of minor problems, such as cuts, bruises, gastrointestinal disorders and other issues

Source: WHO (World Health Organization)